

Greenwich Ferry Boat Landing

Green Fingers Garden Club has been overseeing this area since it's first project in 1990, when we re-landscaped the area, installing walkways and a fountain to commemorate the 350th birthday of Greenwich. We returned to spruce up our project in 2002. This year (2010) Green Fingers is celebrating its 75th anniversary, and to mark the occasion Betsy Mulcare suggested that we return to the site to do more work.

This project could not have been done without: Bruce Spaman the head of Parks and Trees who shepherded the project through all the town approvals, Bill Burgess and his crew in the Parks Dept. who prepared the site, Craig Whitcomb of the Marine Dept. who made the necessary repairs to the seawall before the fence could go in, and Joe Loyd from the Engineering Dept. who gave us the fence guidelines to follow.

Also we want to thank Jarombek Landscaping and Riverside Fence, whom we hired to transform the space.

We refurbished the hillside garden and added a new fence that improves safety and enhances the beauty of the waterfront. The town has supplied benches, recycle bins and a bike rack to encourage year-round use of the space.

We hope our project will be enjoyed by many as a gateway to the waterfront, and a pedestrian bridge joining Bruce Park and Roger Sherman Baldwin Park.
